

How does k affect model performance on evaluation sets?

Initially K increases, then it fluctuates but gets stable again eventually as per the elbow rule

So SVM performs better than NB.

By varying k , you also change sample size for training. How can the sample size affect model performance?

When K increases the training set decreases because the splitting of data decreases so the variation in AUC increases.